UNWED MOTHER TELLS OF LOVE GIVEN SHERIFF

Lorain Woman Takes Stand to Describe Alleged Illicit Romance.

CITES WEEK-END VISITS

Official, Named as Father of Child, Called Only Man In Her Life.

(By Associated Press)

ELYRIA, O.—Miss Mary Bender testified today to illicit relations with Sheriff Carl R. Finegan, who she charges is the father of her daughter, Patricia Ann, born July 4, 1937.

"I met Carl the first time in June, 1935, but in July, 1936, we started to keep steady company," she told the jury of seven men and five women hearing the paternity suit.

"He would come to my house on week-ends, and came in August, September, October and November, practically every week-end."

"Did you have relations with any other man?" Albert Gruelich, her attorney asked.

"No, none at all," she replied.

"We had intimate relations the first time in July, 1936. I kept company with no other men during that time. We would stop off at different places and have a glass of beer or so."

Finegan's attorney, Don Myers, said yesterday "testimony will be introduced in an attempt to show that Mary Bender told a nurse at St. Ann's hospital, Cleveland, that William Patrick Duffy, municipal judge of Lorain, was the father of her child." Miss Bender, in a deposition, denied such a statement.

Says 'Attitude Changed.'

After the sheriff learned of her condition, she said, his attitude changed, and "he was no longer the perfect lover."

Asked if the 37-year-old Finegan called to see her in the hospital, the 23-year-old Lorain brunet said:

"He was in to see me three times but I couldn't talk with him because he always had a social worker with him. I never could get a chance to talk with him alone."

After her brief testimony, one of her sisters, Mrs. Anna Lahetta, of Lorain, was called to the stand. Miss Bender lived with Mrs. Lahetta after she became pregnant.

Mrs. Margaret Urban, a sister, testified the sheriff came to the Bender home at least 10 times in the summer of 1936 and that once she found them on a davenport kissing.

Frank Bender, the girl's 69-year-old father; Rudolph Urban, a brother-in-law, and John Bender, a brother, also testified to seeing Finegan in the home.

Myers declared Finegan never had illicit relations with Miss Bender, who charges conception took place in Finegan's automobile "on or about Oct. 9, 1936" beneath a bridge between Elyria and Lorain.

Finegan lost to William Grall by 94 votes in the 1936 election, but was appointed to succeed Grall after the latter went to prison for taking a bribe from a vice resort.

Trip To Accident Scene Proves Just Joy Ride For Jury

A court-authorized trip to Windsor yesterday afternoon to view an accident scene turned out to be just a joy ride in a chartered city bus for the 12 Richland county petit jurors.

The jurors, who had been ordered by Common Pleas Judge P. H. Wieland of Morrow county to have a look at the accident scene before hearing testimony in a damage case, returned to the courthouse to find that the case had been settled during their absence.

Judge Wieland, hearing the case by special assignment, immediately sent the jury home until the week of Dec. 4 when the next jury cases are scheduled for trial.

The action, brought by Marcus Riggs, Mansfield, sought $4,100 damages for injuries he received more than a year ago in a traffic crash on route 42 in Windsor. He filed the suit against Miriam Stauffer of near Mansfield, driver of one of the two cars involved in the crash.

Attorneys in the case who reached the settlement agreement declined to say how much they settled for. Prosecutor G. W. Marnott and Atty. John C. O'Donnell were counsel for the plaintiff and Attys. Weldon and Huston for the defendant.

Tygers to Play Night Football In 1940; Board Orders Lights

Acts to Permit Full Schedule

School Heads Say Shift To Enable Them To Book Top-Flight Opponents; Cost Of Plant Estimated At $4,000.

The 1940 Mansfield high Tygers will play night football.

This was decided last night when the board of education voted unanimously to install a lighting plant at Stadium field.

The decision was not unexpected, although there had been little public discussion of night football by the board. Chief reason for the move, Superintendent W. L. Miller and board members said, was to permit arranging a complete schedule for next year's gridders.

Since Mansfield was one of the few major teams in the state which neither had a lighted field nor scheduled night games, great difficulty had been experienced in recent years in scheduling top-flight opponents.

Schedule-makers found that most first class teams were playing on Friday nights, especially during the early part of the season, and were not available for afternoon games

Schools that have played night football have also found that revenue from admissions jumped sharply, and this was another consideration that influenced the board, although members said it was secondary to booking good games.

Details of the type of lighting plant to be installed were not discussed, but it was estimated that the cost would be about $4,000. Purchase of equipment will be left to the athletic council, composed of H. W. Arlin, school board member, president; Superintendent Miller, Athletic Director Harry E. Mehock, Coaches Paul Snyder and Verne Hoffman; Earl Mann, faculty manager, and George Sherman, treasurer. Sherman is also a faculty member.

First Discussed in 1936.

The question of night football was first discussed by the board in 1936 when Mansfield withdrew from the N. C. O. conference because it objected to night games.

Although saying that this was not the purpose, Arlin, said that night football will increase the revenue, and will provide the funds that will be needed to operate the elaborate football system that has

'BOSS' LOSES

Parole Plea of Pendergast Denied by U. S. Board.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Tom Pendergast, one-time big boss of the Kansas City Democratic machine, was denied a parole today from the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kas.

The federal board of parole announced that it was "constrained to the strong conviction" that a parole "would be unjustifiable and incompatible with the public interest."

The board said that its decision was made "after a most thorough investigation, followed by observation, interrogation, and careful deliberation in weighing all of the facts and circumstances surrounding the Overt act, plea and sentence, as well as taking into consideration the age and physical condition of the applicant, and the further fact that he has no prior criminal history of record."

AUTOIST HELD IN TRAFFIC DEATH

Mansfielder Bound Over to Jury on Second Degree Manslaughter Charge.

Paul Paraske, 24, of 8 Chester avenue, was held in the county jail today on a charge of second degree manslaughter in connection with the death of John M. Irwin, 54, Akron Boy Scout leader who was fatally injured in an automobile collision 10 days ago on U. S. route 30-N.

Irwin, an employe of the Goodyear Zepplin corporation at Akron, died in General hospital Saturday afternoon without regaining consciousness. He suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries when Paraske's car collided with the machine in which he was en route to an archery meet in southern Ohio.

Paraske was held on a $1,000 bond fixed by Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch after the defendant pleaded innocent in municipal court this morning and waived preliminary examination and asked to be bound to the grand jury.

The charges were filed by Corp. C. L. Strayer of the state highway patrol who charged in the affidavit that Paraske was driving at a "high and dangerous rate of speed" and attempted to pass another vehicle on a uphill grade causing the accident.

Irwin was riding with Eldon J. Morgan and Thomas Armstrong, both of Akron who were slightly injured in the crash which occured on U. S. route 30 N, four miles west of Mansfield. Two other occupants in the car, Lee Heib, 54, and Ben F. Morgan, also of Akron, escaped injury.

'Glad' She Killed Texas Lawyer

Central Press Phonephoto.

Miss Corinne Maddox.

Quietly admitting that she had shot and killed Brooks Coffman, Dallas, Tex., attorney, and was "glad he's dead," Miss Corinne Maddox, 26, also of Dallas, today calmly awaited her fate. Blazing away with two guns—a .32 and a .36 caliber pistols, Miss Maddox shot Coffman, whom she encountered on a downtown Dallas street. Coffman was to have gone on trial next month on charges of having stabbed Miss Maddox some months ago.

Girl Composed 'Poem of Hate' Before Killing Dallas Lawyer

DALLAS, Tex.—Pretty Corinne Mattox hated Attorney Brooks Coffman so intensely that before riddling him with the bullets of two pistols, she composed a poem of hate for him to read in his dying moments, police revealed today.

Miss Maddox, 26, member of a wealthy and prominent family, shot Coffman in the back and continued to shoot him while he lay on the sidewalk, propping himself up on one elbow, begging for mercy.

Then she crossed the street to a telegraph company and engaged a messenger to deliver her poem of hate to the hospital where she assumed he would be taken. He died of his 10 bullet wounds before he got there and, in consequence, never read it.

Made public by police, her homicide apology read:

"To you

"Who caused me all my pain and grief

"And later prayed for my recovery

"Why? So if I lived you could torture me?

"It couldn't have been for my relief

"Because upon my life you've made more threats

"As in your praper

"I lived and came back to thee

"But back for back

"And now I'm forced to do this

"It is with deep regret

"May God have mercy on us both.

"Corrine."

LONDON—(U.P.)—Kermit Roosevelt, son of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, told newspaper correspondents today that soon he would become a British subject.

Roosevelt, who was a British captain in the World war and who last month was commissioned a second lieutenant in the British army, said that he considers that the war aims of the Allies constitute a "clear cut, moral issue."

"I consider the issue more clearly defined than in the last war," Roosevelt said. "The sooner it is over the better for you and the better for all of us."

Puts Okay On Largest January Class In Senior High History

The largest mid-year senior class in the history of the Mansfield schools—comprising 126 students—was approved for graduation last night by the board of education.

The class, which will include 72 girls and 54 boys, will be graduated at commencement exercises Jan. 26 in Senior high school auditorium. W. C. Mead, member of the board of education, will award the diplomas, but a commencement speaker has not been chosen.

Easily a record January class, the first group of 1940 graduates will include 38 more students than the class last January when only 88 received diplomas. Two years ago there were 87 in the class.

Since it is more than nine weeks until commencement, the board authorized Supt. W. L. Miller to withhold the diploma of any of the prospective graduates who fail to meet the requirements for graduation between now and commencement.

Members of the class are:

BOYS

WPA FALLS TO LOWEST MARK IN TWO YEARS

County Rolls Dwindle to 400 as Industry Spurts; 1,145 Employed Year Ago.

The upswing in private industry in the Mansfield area today had dropped the Richland county WPA employment to 400, the lowest mark in at least two years. Last November there were 1,145 on WPA in the county.

Approximately 100 WPA workers have been absorbed by private industry in the past six weeks, including 30 since Nov. 1, C. W. Adkins, county project supervisor, said today.

The drain of private employment on the work relief rolls has been so heavy that Adkins said he expected only 50 per cent of the 35 men called back to work next Monday to report. Two or three small projects in the city have been delayed in the past two months because there were not enough men available to fill the employment quota.

Hit Peak Year Ago.

From a peak of more than 1,100 last winter, WPA employment in the county has decreased steadily, due to a pick-up in industry and a federal order calling for the dismissal of workers who have been continuously employed in projects for 18 months or more.

Adkins said five major projects are now in operations in the county and work is scheduled to start Monday on four bridges on county roads.

County road and bridge jobs are providing employment for 268 men, while there are 60 on the Mansfield parks project and 60 on the city water line extension job.

Removal of telephone, gas and water lines from the old Bowman street bridge north of Sixth street has delayed work on the new $30,000 bridge to be built there this winter, Adkins said.

TINY BABY DIES

Infant Born at Hospital Here Weighed 36 Ounces.

A baby, weighing only two pounds, four ounces, died at 9 a. m. today at Mansfield General hospital.

Name of the infant and its parents were not revealed. Hospital attendants and the attending physician declined to give out any information concerning either the birth or death.

They refused also to give the child's age, date of birth and cause of death, stating that the family had requested that no information be given out.

As far as is known the child was normal in every respect. Its parents are said to live in Bellville or in that vicinity.

New Serial Tells Story of Girl Who Lacks Only Love

It's always an interesting situation when a woman has everything she wants except the man she loves. That situation opens "Tell Bill Goodbye," the sparkling, modern romance which starts tomorrow in The News-Journal in serial form.

The new story is from the pen of Marie Blizard, author of "Flowers At Her Feet" and "White Orchids." It is the drama of a girl who had everything — beauty, money, arrogance, courage—and who was engaged to one of the big town's most eligible men.

But she was bored with her life and with her fiance. So she decided to take a flyer in settlement work, just for fun. And then things began to happen.

There are four principal characters in the opening chapters of Miss Blizard's streamlined romance. They are Fabienne Seymour, daughter of wealth; her fiance, Nicky Bartlett, heir to millions; Bill Mallory, a young surgeon who is determined to devote his life work to humanity, and Fabienne's best friend, Ellen,

Ship Explodes And Goes Down In Mined Seas

11,930-Ton Japanese Vessel Was 14th Victim Of Sea Warfare In 4 Days; 200 Aboard Craft; British Lose Two Mine Sweepers, Down Plane.

(By United Press)

LONDON—A big liner—identified in messages to the Japanese embassy as the 11,930-ton Japanese Terukuni Maru—was blown up off the east coast of England today, the 14th victim of intensified sea warfare since Saturday.

The Japanese embassy said messages from Harwich identified the liner as the Terukuni Maru, but gave no details.

Eyewitnesses said that the liner was a large one with two funnels.

"After the explosion the liner was partly submerged," one eye-witness said.

"Thereafter it disappeared completely.

"I saw lots of ships racing to the scene from all directions."

It was the 14th ship sunk—mostly by mines—since Saturday, including the Dutch liner Simon Bolivar with loss of about 84 lives.

The Terukuni Maru is of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha line, registered out of Tokyo. She was built in 1930 in the Mitsubish yard in Japan.

The Japanese embassy said it had a telephone message from Harwich saying the Terukuni Maru had sunk but had no details.

The telephone message from Harwich indicated that the Japanese ship went down in the same area where the Simon Bolivar, the British steamer Blackhill and several other ships have been sunk in the last four days—apparently the center of a floating mine area.

205 on Board.

It was believed that the Terukuni Maru struck a mine. She carried a crew of 180 and 25 passengers, including one Briton.

The Terukuni Maru was a crack liner of the NYK line, and en route from London to Japan.

(In New York the Nippon-Yusen-Kaisha line offices said the Terukuni Maru had arrived in London Nov. 17 from Yokohama and was scheduled to pick up cargo and passengers at various English ports, returning to Japan Dec. 8.)

It was not known whether a mine of a torpedo struck the liner.

Meanwhile, Great Britain moved to retaliate against Nazi sea warfare by seizing German exports on the high seas, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain announced in the house of commons.

The prime minister's statement, in reference to British charges that Nazi had resorted to "unrestricted" war at sea by use of floating mines, was made as messages from Harwich reported that the 11,930-ton Japanese passenger liner Terukuni Maru had been blown up and sunk.

Previous reports today had told of the sinking of the minesweeper Mastiff and the British trawler Sea Sweeper by mines.

BERLIN: London Photographed By Scout Planes, Germany Says

(By International News Service)

BERLIN—German reconnaissance planes which carried out observation flights over France and England collected valuable information, the official German news agency DNB reported today.

Scouting planes, the agency said, flew over Scapa Flow, Scotland, southern England, the channel coast and northern France despite heavy storms and frequent rains.

After remaining in the air between six and seven hours, the craft returned to their bases with important information, according to the report.

British pursuit planes and anti-aircraft batteries unsuccessfully attacked German machines which flew over the London region at a high altitude, DNB reported, while the planes which flew over France encountered no resistance.

German quarters attached particular importance to reconnaissance flights over England on Sunday, during which extensive photographs were made of Lodon and vicinity.

Authorities said that proclamation of martial law in Prague and four districts of the Moravia-Bohemia protectorate had been received with relative calm by the population there. They declared that martial law provisions would be applied only in dealing with murder, revolt, open violence and serious property damage.

Under martial law, persons coming up for trial either are acquitted or sentenced to death.

BOMBAY: Gandhi Sets India's Independence As War Aid Price

(By Associated Press)

BOMBAY—Mohandas K. Gandhi, demanding a pledge of India's independence as the price of co-operation in the European war, declared today, "the issue is purely moral, for owing to her material and military control, Britain is able to regulate garrisons and drain India's wealth at will."

The wispy, 70-year-old Indian nationalist leader, refreshed by his invariable Monday period of silence, met at Allahabad with a committee of the Congress party (nationalists) seeking to influence the country's attitude toward the war.

Complicating the situation is the ever-present strife between Hindus and Moslems, which resulted in 12 deaths yesterday in rioting at Sukkur, in the province of Sind, northwestern India.

Eleven persons were killed there Sunday in the disturbances originating from the arrest of Moslems accused of setting Hindu shops afire.

The Moslem league, second largest political party in India has endorsed the British white paper of Oct. 17, deferring discussion of India's status until after the war.

The league asked for clarification of some points, however.

Gandhi, revered by millions of Indians, found the British statement unacceptable and demanded "a declaration to free India from bondage."

Of the 11 provincial governments, the eight dominated by his Congress party have resigned in protest against the British refusal. Only in Assam province has the opposition formed a new cabinet. The other seven are being ruled by British provincial governors under emergency orders.

Glass 'Blesses' Garner for Presidential Race in '40

ALSO FAVORS NOMINATION OF SENATOR BYRD

'No Man Better Qualified Than Byrd, Garner,' Says Virginia Lawmaker.

(Picture on Page 3.)

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Senator Carter Glass, dean of the Democratic party's elder statesmen, today gave his direct blessing to the presidential aspirations of Vice President John Nance Garner.

Glass praised Garner's qualifications for the presidency while repeating an earlier endorsement of his long-time friend, Virginia's "favorite son" candidate, Senator Harry Byrd. It was apparent Glass intended to exert all his influence to nominate Byrd in 1940 but that he would have no regret if Garner nosed out the Virginian for the Democratic nomination.

'Must Stop Spending.'

Interviewed on a brief visit to Washington to see his dentist, Glass also warned the Democratic party it must stop deficit spending if it desires victory in 1940. Asked the direct question, as to what the Democrats must do to win next year, Glass replied:

"I can tell you better what it ought not to do to win. It ought to stop spending more than the government can collect."

The Virginian then was asked who he favored for the presidency in 1940. He replied:

"I know no man better qualified for the presidency than Harry Flood Byrd or John Nance Garner."

It was the second time this month that Glass went out of his way to praise Garner. Early in November, the vice president autographed and sent Glass a copy of a new Garner biography. The autograph included an inscription of deep friendship. Glass later made public his reply to Garner, which read in part:

"It was deeply touched by the autograph on the front page and shall prize it so long as I live. No man in public service has had more of my confidence and affection than you."

Glass, who first entered the national political arena when elected to the house of representatives on Dec. 2, 1901, apparently has joined the group who believes President Roosevelt will not become a candidate for a third term in 1940. He declined to answer any questions on that subject, but his endorsement of Garner along with Byrd seemed to be an indirect answer.

ONE KILLED, 2 HURT IN CRASH

Truck Hits State Highway Vehicle Parked Near Cleveland.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — William Lovely, 60, Cuyahoga county highway worker, was killed and two other workmen injured today when a truck-trailer struck a parked highway truck on an overhead south of nearby Bedford on route 8.

Injured were John ONeill, whose condition was reported as serious and Henry Strohmyer, driver of the highway department vehicle. Paul Dugan, driver of the truck-trailer, escaped injury.

The highway workers were cleaning gutters when the truck-trailer, laden with tires, rounded a curve. The collision sent the highway truck forward, striking the workmen. Dugan's vehicle caught fire after the crash.

Flabbergasted and unable to leave his place of business, he called his wife and mumbled to bring his teeth down. She misunderstood and thought he said "keys." "Are they on a ring?" she demanded. He spluttered in irritation. "Why in ——— should I keep 'em on a ring? They are with my handkerchiefs in the dresser d r a w e r." When she looked in the drawer, she saw the "toothies" and decided he had forgotten them as well as the keys. When she couldn't find the keys, light began to dawn and she laughed all the way down town as she delivered the store molars.

SEEN AS 17TH DISTRICT ENTRY

Coshocton Legislator Touted as G. O. P. Candidate for Ashbrook's Post.

J. Harry McGregor of West Lafayette, Coshocton county, majority floor leader in the Ohio house of representatives, was seen today as an almost certain candidate in 1940 for the Republican nomination for congress in the 17th district, which includes Richland county, a United Press dispatch from Columbus said.

In Columbus for a relief conference, McGregor declined to comment, but sources close to him said he had virtually decided to run, the press dispatch said. He is expected to make a formal announcement of his candidacy about the first of the year.

Congressman William A. Ashbrook of Johnstown, the Democratic incumbent has not committed himself on his plans for next year. He has been in poor health for the past year, however, and there was speculation as to whether he will run again.

Walter S. Woodward of Bellville, defeated last year by Congressman Ashbrook, was also seen as a Republican possibility for next year. He was the Townsend-backed candidate in 1938. Another probable Republican candidate is Col. Oliver Dockery of Newark, who was defeated for the G. O. P. nomination last year by Woodward.

McGregor, a West Lafayette contractor, is serving his third term in the house of representatives from Coshocton county.

FUND OVERDRAWN, CITY SCHOOLS THANKFUL FOR RENEWAL OF LEVY

With its general fund overdrawn $5,695 two months before the end of the first semester, the Mansfield board of education today had the three-mill school levy to be thankful for on Thanksgiving day.

Clerk John H. Bristor of the board reported the deficit at a meeting last night and requested permission to seek an advance draft against the last-half county personal tax collection. The board granted the request.

The tax advance will be needed to meet the Dec. 1 payroll, Bristor said. He added that about $45,000 in state school funds is due about Dec. 1 but it may not arrive in time to be used for payrolls.

Without the three-mill levy which was approved at the election two weeks ago by a 68.4 per cent majority, the schools probably would be forced to close by February for lack of funds, it was pointed out.

Virtually completing its work with the million-dollar building program, the board last night approved several architects' change orders, adding about $800 to the cost of construction of the two new junior high school buildings.

The orders, which must be approved by PWA officials, call for minor changes in construction plans for the new John Simpson and Johnny Appleseed junior high buildings, nearing completion.

The board approved the appointment of Mrs. Blanche Mayne as a substitute teacher in the city deaf school. She formerly taught in Elyria.

Tentative approval was given by the board to the city's request for permission to paint the word "Mansfield" on the roof of the new John Simpson building as a guide to airplane pilots. The permit also must be approved by PWA which is contributing $450,000 to the million-dollar program fund.

The board granted permission to the City Class A Basketball league to use the Senior high school gymnasium for games this winter.

WARNS FINNS

Soviet Fleet Holds Maneuvers Off New Baltic Bases.

MOSCOW—(AP)—Soviet Russia disclosed today that her Baltic fleet is holding large scale maneuvers from newly-won bases in that area.

At the same time she warned Finland that nothing "will ever break our decision to establish a strong peace all over the Finnish gulf."

The warning was voiced by Admiral V. Tributz, commander of the Baltic fleet, in an article in the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda, organ of the Communist Youth league.

Tributz declared that the Soviet fleet now was in command of the Baltic with the acquisition of bases from Estonia and Latvia. He said the Baltic fleet, previously landlocked in the Gulf of Finland by winter ice, now could navigate throughout the year.

CITIES' PLEA TO CALL ASSEMBLY REJECTED AGAIN

Bricker Tells Cleveland and Toledo to Wait Ruling on New Revenue Sources.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — Their hopes for legislative aid blasted, officials of two hard-pressed Ohio cities turned today to the attorney general and the supreme court in their quest for money to replenish empty relief coffers.

For the fourth time in less than three months, Gov. John W. Bricker told representatives of Cleveland, Toledo and three other cities yesterday that he would not call the general assembly into special session to enact new relief financing measures.

But at the same time, he pointed to cases pending in the supreme court and an awaited opinion from Atty. Gen. Thomas J. Herbert as possible avenues of fresh revenue, and suggested the city officials put to better application means already at their disposal.

Cleveland's Mayor Harold H Burton, declaring his city would have a $1,000,000 relief deficit by the end of the year, urged a special session be called next week to avert a crisis. He was supported by Toledo officials, who said relief funds had been exhausted since Sept 15, grocers had cut off credit, and state matching funds were used only for feeding the ill.

Bricker said he had asked the attorney general for a ruling on whether notes could be issued against collections of excess utility excise taxes, and if it were favorable Cleveland could obtain about $700,000 from that source. There is the possibility of obtaining an additional $627,000 by diverting 25 per cent of Cuyahoga county's share of motor vehicle license fees for relief, the governor added, but this is dependent upon a favorable decision by the supreme court on a case now pending.

Bricker said Cleveland had failed to use a law allowing it to issue bonds against an additional 10 per cent of utility excise taxes, estimated to yield $454,000, and suggested $226,000 in bonds might be issued against delinquent taxes for the first half of this year. The city also could obtain $55,000 diverting 10 per cent of motor vehicle license fees now used for traffic regulation, he added.

CHANGES PLAN

Westinghouse Announces New Vacation Set-up for 1940.

Changes in the Westinghouse vacation plan for 1940, affecting hourly rated employes of the company in Mansfield, were announced today by L. E. Osborne, manager of manufacturing and engineering.

Under the new plan, all hourly rated employes who have been continuously in the company's employ for one year are entitled to a vacation of one week with pay, Osborne said.

Those who have been employed for a total of five years or more will receive a vacation of two weeks with pay, provided they have been continuously employed at least six months immediately prior to the time of starting vacation, he added.

Under the present plan, employes receive a vacation of one week with pay after five years of service, and two weeks after 10 years of service, providing they have been continuously employed for one year preceeding the time of starting vacation.

FAIR ENOUGH!

First Chapter In History Of How Newspaper Broke Up Pendergast's Machine

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

KANSAS CITY—Tom Pendergast, the old Democratic boss of Kansas City, and Otto Higgins, his police director, are in Leavensworth penitentiary, the machine is broke and Democratized, and the wide-open rotten city of two years ago is tightly policed and miserably pure.

This change was brought about by several agencies of the federal government with the reluctant and very belated co-operation of the local courts, but credit for the original initiative and the spade work belongs to a group of reporters on the staff of the Kansas City Star.

Their persistent digging turned up the first real proof of the padding of registration rolls and, later in the fight, they checked every one of the 600 names on a list of county jurors who were to try members of the gang on state charges.

This investigation proved that about half of the jurors were political ringers, whose livelihood depended on the vindication and preservation of the machine. The jury fraud was so flagrant that the state Supreme court set aside all verdicts by members of this panel.

* * *

The canvass of the registration roll began in the fall of 1936 when a new registration showed a tremendous increase in the voting power, which could not be explained. Roy Roberts, the Star's managing editor, realized that the assignment called for a long season of old-fashioned reporting.

Charles Graham began the investigation. His method was to select a dwelling house, hotel or apartment in a neighborhood where the organization was known to be strong, and quietly bracket the place by asking the neighbors on both sides, sometimes even children playing in the streets, who lived there. He would then refer to the registration list and visit the premises under suspicion.

The householders, loyal to the precinct organization, usually insisted that the persons registered actually did reside there, but by quoting their replies faithfully in print and describing the quarters, Graham was able to convey the information that most of them were lying.

He soon had the assistance of Paul Miner on the canvass, and as the campaign widened, the staff on various phases increased to a dozen.

Jack Williams, Reginald Tolley and Ernest Tucker back-stopped the play at the city hall, the citadel of the Pendergast gang; Alvin McCoy, Robert Clark and William Curry co-operated in the same way at the court house and Dan Larimer at the federal building where Maurice Milligan, the U. S. attorney, presently began an investigation under a conspiracy law passed in the day of the original Ku Klux Klan.

Paul Fisher, a newspaper writer to warm the heart of an old-time city editor, did roundup stories, including one perfect description of the close, unremitting labor and loyalty of the precinct captain who is always the backbone of any efficient political organization.

Working as a team, the Star men gave Kansas City a thorough understanding of the system, but, nevertheless, failed to arouse public indignation at the time.

* * *

Graham reported a case in which a number of voters registered at a garage where no living quarters were to be found, but were said to be highway freighters who lived in the cabs of their trucks. Of 16 voters registered at an undertaking place, 13 came to the front when their names were published and proved that they were registered legally elsewhere in their respective home precincts. Fifty were registered at a negro brothel where only the keeper and his wife actually resided.

Graham verified 105 fake registrations out of 107 at one place, 48 out of 50 at another and 44 out of 53 at another, proving about 3,000 frauds, all told, in a few weeks.

* * *

Graham was threatened frequently, but Pendergast's lieutenants, afraid of more heat, actually placed guards around him, and after the presidential elections of 1936 on Dec. 14, Milligan began his investigation in the name of the federal government, using much of the Star's material.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—The best-laid plans of mice and men (adv.) sometimes work out very nicely, too.

Nothing can take the element of chance—the breaks—out of a movie career, but there are some front-line examples of carefully mapped campaigns that arrived on schedule at their goals.

To watch Sonja Henie and Robert Cummings on the ice together for their new picture, "Everything Happens at Night," is to see the protagonists of two such campaigns hard at work making the dreams come truer.

Sonja's father never envisioned his little girl on the screen, but it was his goal to make her a champion on the ice, and he deliberately plotted her career that way by giving her dancing lessons when she was four—dancing as a prerequisite to skating e a s e and grace. He carried on the deliberate campaign through her years of training for the Olympics, saw her achieve first ranking there, and lived to see her become, in one picture, a top-notch movie star.

Stardom was, for Sonja, merely another bit of planning—but on Sonja's own part. It wasn't by accident that the girl staged sensational ice shows in the heart of Hollywood before she t a l k e d movie contracts. Her business acumen there could teach Europe a few tricks of propaganda.

Her partner Cummings probably never thought of Hollywood when he inaugurated his extraordinary series of trick plays to fame — but nobody ever planned more assiduously for square meals via the theater than this lad did.

Going to England and selling himself up—in story and snapshot—as a British leading man in order to get work on his return to New York showed Cummings' imagination and daring.

And later, when British leading men fell from favor and it was necessary to revert to an American background in order to cra-h pictures, Bob did it the hard way—he became not only an American but a Texan, complete with accent, to sell Texas's King Vidor on the wisdom of casting him in "So Red the Rose." Bob Cummings' method of attack was like the modern mobile army's—he changed it to fit requirements, dashing to the Texas front when the British sector got out of control.

* * *

The career of Deanna Durbin, in full flower still, would be a sad thing to contemplate were it not for the "plan of campaign" adopted early by her mentor-producer, Joe Pasternak.

A little girl who could sing exceptionally well — Deanna might have belonged to the "freak attraction" class. Little girls grow up—and simply by acknowledging the fact and letting Deanna "grow" naturally, in one picture after another, Pasternak has kept her in a class by herself—which is not labeled "freak" any longer.

Jane Withers is the product of a plan, for her mother early envisioned her as a star and devoted all efforts toward making the dream come true. She won out, and the studio, plan-conscious, is carrying on. Jane in "High School" seems to have made the transition from cute kid to young adolescent as nicely as Deanna Durbin has made hers from sweet child to young womanhood.

Adviser Says 'No' To Writer

By BETTY FAIRFAX

In making up her mind to marry a widower sixteen years older than herself, and hoping I'll tell her she's doing the right thing, Anne is going to get a definite "No" so far as my endorsement of her marriage is concerned.

She goes on to state that she's not in love with anyone else, she is not of an emotional type, and she feels that her marriage would make things easier for her mother, who is an invalid and who is the real love of Anne's life

My young friend doesn't give her age, but it's safe to say she's not a day over 20, perhaps younger, as she speaks of her graduation only a year ago and is wondering if she can have her white organdy made over for a wedding gown. That's what she wore under the cap and gown the day she received her diploma

A wedding dress doesn't rate a pin's importance. If you watch the papers closely, you'll realize that the ivory satins have a Reno finale much more often than the simple going-away gown Congeniality of tastes, understanding, genuine love keep the good ship Matrimony afloat longer than seven bridesmaids dressed in pastel shades and a shower bouquet fashioned from white orchids.

But so many girls are too young and too inexperienced to understand this. Anne, among them, I fear. My correspondent is not aware that there's a pattern about this business of living. There is no reliable padlock on love. Anne may not be in love with anyone today and madly, ecstatically in love with someone tomorrow. And the very fact that she's married and presumably the door is shut on romance may be another reason why her eye roves unconsciously for a possible Prince Charming

Human nature being what it is and having such a large alloy of perversity, this girl may become terribly bored by the widower, sixteen years her senior, after she marries him.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"I ought to have you both put into confinement," Dicky went on musingly, "but—"

At the first note of indecision the woman faced him brazenly, mistaking his hesitation for weakness.

"But you'd rather not have the publicity," she sneered. "You're right at that"

I did not learn what Dicky replied, for Lillian abruptly stopepd her lip reading and leaned over the table to her big husband.

"Here's where we come in, Harry," she said. "Four men are parked outside in the armored car. Have them bring it up in front of this entrance right away. Tell the chauffeur to have it ready to jump forward on the signal. Leave one man in the car with the chauffeur, ready to jump out if it be necessary, and station another one just outside the door. Come back yourself immediately, and bring with you the man who looks most like a dinner guest. You'll find me sounding off at that other table, with Madge by my side. You don't mind my barging in like this, do you?"

"No, I don't mind," he said, smiling down at her, for he had risen at her first words "I'll be back on the wings of the wind. But—be careful"

"Surest thing you know," she rejoined carelessly. Then he had gone and she had risen to her feet.

"Come along," she said, "and follow my lead. If I cough, it's a signal for you to pick up a cue. Or if I appeal to you, answer according to your best lights."

Lillian went straight to the point when she reached the table.

"Pleasant Surprise."

"'Lo, Dicky!" she said easily. "How are you, Ede? This is such a pleasant surprise. I surely didn't expect to see you here. We would have been over before, but I didn't recognize you at first, and thought perhaps the Dicky-bird might not want us to butt in. But when I finally made up my mind what was under that luffly wig, I came right over."

"More phonies, I'll bet, I heard the woman mutter to herself. Then her voice raised, raucously, though tremulously.

"What is this, anyway, a costume party?"

"You may call it that, if you wish" Lillian threw the careless answer at her indifferently, but kept her eyes on Edith, who was staring at her in wide-eyed astonishment. But I was conscious that Dicky's eyes were on me in studious, frowning appraisal.

"Lillian!" Edith ejaculated. "What—why—? And who is this with you?"

She knew the answer to the question I knew that by the queer look in her eyes But I had no time to observe her other reactions, for with one of his unexpected changes of mood, Dicky's frown relaxed and he gave a subdued chuckle while his lips quirked into a wide grin.

"'Come out of the bushes, Pocahontas'" he quoted to me. "'You is diskivered.'"

Do Blood Tests Prove Paternity

The scant ration of time which congress is able to deduct from the plea of the Isolationists and the Cash and Carry boys, or even the group combining the two, they are devoting to genetics, chromosomes and blood genes type, A, B, O, M and N. The first three are called basic, the other two supplementary.

All of this change for the lawmakers concerns the legitimacy of a baby boy who coos pleasantly with no realization that his fate hangs in the balance.

The great alphabetical blood-matching test concerns the future status of the child now being debated in the District of Columbia Federal Court before Justice Jesse Adkins.

The parents are scrapping over the subject of the baby's paternity, and the judge, like Solomon, confronted with the question of parenthood, does not resort to Solomon's drastic expedient of dividing the child, but adopts the more modern method of matching blood for blood. Accordingly, he has ordered the mother to submit herself and her child to a blood test, which the husband says he is willing to accept as proof.

But counsel for the lady appeals the court order. He says such tests are not legal in the District of Columbia and fail to prove anything. In spite of which the local case has stirred up great interest in Congress, as Congress makes the laws for Washington.

While Washington has no law on its statute books which makes blood tests conclusive, the legislatures of New York, New Jersey, Ohio and Wisconsin have authorized the courts of their states to order blood tests in cases of contested paternity, and to accept its expert testimony as evidence of qualified physicians designated by the court to perform the test.

But with a woman's reputation challenged, and a child's entire future depending on the findings, what do such tests prove if anything?

For a long time now, specialists have got together and by a multitude of experiments have concluded that a person's physical nature is controlled by certain agents called genes When these group themselves together, they are known as chromosomes.

At the instant of creation, twenty-four chromosomes for the mother, twenty-four chromosomes for the father (it's always that number) begin a long battle to dominate the appearance, mentality and structure of the new human being

A blend results, varying in accordance with the dominance of one set of genes over its opposites in the other parent. Paternity evidence is based on the combination of genes influence found in the bloods of husband, wife and child.

Broadly speaking, that is the preface of the argument on which the fate of this child hinges. But when one gets into the alphabetical classification of A, B, O, M and N, the argument seems to leave the rails for the laiety and become too specialized for the man in the street, i. e., you and me.

DO A BIT OF THINKING

JUST A LITTLE use of that decorative adornment on top of your neck is needed to prevent some of the most disheartening calamities that otherwise may befall you at the bridge table. Only brief reflection is required in many spots to show that a certain lead, play or bid does not necessarily indicate the first thing that comes to your mind. It may also betoken something quite different, and if you think of this alternative you may find a way to protect yourself against either possibility.

West led the heart A, and South went into a brief study. He decided instantly that the lead denied possession of the K. Therefore East had the heart K, which would be caught in a ruffing finesse. When West, to prevent ruffs, then led the spade 9 to the 10, South quickly took the spade K and spade A, then led the heart Q. East played small on this, and South let it ride. The K won, setting the contract.

In the post-mortem, South maintained stoutly that his play was right, because West was known to the group as a thoroughly orthodox leader and could be depended upon to lead a K from A-K combination. North corrected him. If the A-K combination had no small cards with it, the orthodox lead is the A, so that a later lead or play of the K indicates the holder is now void of the suit.

Had South thought of that, he could have ruffed a second round of hearts, and would have dropped the K, thus managing to get two diamond discards on hearts and make his contract because of the way he had West's club A trapped.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, Nov. 22.

Events move rapidly toward ambitious goals on this day, judging by the benefic chain of planetary configurations. These promise conspicuous achievement in affiliation with large and important groups and organizations, where innovation, fresh methods and high ideals hold sway. The young and progressive may attain high place, possibly by means of quick intuitions or insight into live issues of public, financial or educational importance.

Those whose birthday it is will find themselves under highly stimulated, expansive and liberal urges during the year, with many high ideals, noble purposes and ambitious objectives pushed to pleasant and powerful culminations. Public, group and idealistic issues seem involved, and there is a prospect of substantial co-operation from powerful interests.

A child born on this day may be brilliant and adaptable to many splendid achievements in life through its alertness, keen grasp and intuitions. It may have liberal, generous and humanitarian ideals, possibly lifting it to public service and popularity.

DESIGNED FOR KITCHEN

When selecting dresses for use in the kitchen see that the buttons are not of material that will melt or ignite, when ironed. Also avoid frilly straps, large loose pockets or ornaments that might catch onto the stove, cabinet drawers or door handles.

Texas Aggies Pass Vols In A-P Grid Poll.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Like a judge at a bathing beauty contest would pass up a knock-kneed gal, football's critics from coast to coast this week passed up the unbeaten Volunteers of Tennessee and named Texas Aggies as the nation's outstanding grid power. The Aggies, just one game away from a perfect season, garnered 38 first place votes.

A-MAIZED and Blue . . . that's about how the Michigan boys will feel along about 5:30 p. m. Saturday, say the Ohioans.

Ohio's decisive victory over Illinois, which upset the Maize and Blue, and Michigan's failure to show a greater margin of superiority over Pennsylvania have made the Bucks definite favorites in Saturday's meeting at Ann Arbor.

Johnny Hallabrin's performance in Ohio's 21 to 0 victory over the Illini failed to draw any "rave" notives from Columbus experts. One of the writers said Hallabrin played an "adequate game." Another failed to mention any of his deeds, only that he took Jim Langhurst's place in the lineup.

The Mansfield fullback gained more than one-third of the yardage accumulated by the Bucks on the ground . . . and they call that "adequate."

HOW would you like to realize 2,800 per cent on an investment? Grand? That's what Iowa University thinks. And that's what Iowa will realize before the complete record has been written in to the Hawkeye financial book. Iowa paid Erl Tubbs $6,500 a year ago for his coaching chores, and finished in the red. Iowa kicked up the ante for his successor, Dr. Eddie Anderson, to $10,000 this year, and will realize at least $100,000 more in football receipts than it did a year ago. Consequently, Iowa will show a net dividend of $100,000 this year from a $3 500 investment in coaching acumen.

They're still telling stories on Joe Savoldi of Notre Dame. Once he was following Frank Carideo with only one rival blocking the way, Frank motioned for him to swerve a certain way; instead of that Savoldi went right to both men, knocked the opponent one way and Carideo another. . . . Frank, now an assistant coach at Iowa, says "I guess I was just cluttering up his path."

Portsmouth, Toledo Elevens Invited for Game Billed in Columbus Dec. 2.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Massillon's mighty Tigers looked natural today as they led Ohio's high school football parade for the second straight campaign with a record of 10 victories, no defeats, no ties, and a point total of 460 against 25 for the foe.

The 10 wins boosted the Tiger victory string to 23, the last one Saturday's 20 to 6 conquest of Canton McKinley before 22,000 fans. With that traditional foe out of the way, the Tigers rested on their laurels, declining a bid to participate in the first annual Buckeye bowl game at Ohio State University stadium Dec. 2.

* * *

Coach Paul Brown of the Massillon team declared "Massillon definitely is not interested in a post-season game."

* * *

The bowl contest definitely was on, however, with the Portsmouth Trojans and Toledo Waite tentatively invited, the final decision depending on the outcome of the team's turkey day battles Thursday. Portsmouth meets Erie (Pa.) East while Waite takes on Scott for the city championship. Receipts from the Buckeye bowl game, which is being sponsored jointly by Columbus sports writers and the Agonis club, will be split 50-50 by the two entrants.

The post-season classic had the stamp of approval of H. R. Townsend, State High school athletic commissioner, and Ohio State University donated the use of its vast stadium.

The committee in charge, in extending its invitation to two of the State's outstanding teams, decreed that "the bowl game is not necessarily for the state championship, but we wish to give recognition to two top-notch teams each year, and we hope to build the bowl game into a colorful annual occasion."

Anything Can---and Usually Does---Happen When Ohio State and Michigan Collide

By JOHN H. COLBURN

COLUMBUS —(AP)—When Ohio State and Michigan meet on the gridiron anything can happen —and usually does

Ohio State, riding high at the top of the Western conference, today heeded seriously that tradition as it pointed for a win over the Wolves to gain its first undisputed championship since 1920. The Bucks were warned that Michigan, on the rebound after two unexpected defeats, will be no setup

* * *

"Michigan has an excellent team and since it is finishing its season Saturday with Ohio it will really open up," observed Fritz Mackey, Ohio freshman coach who has been scouting the Wolves.

* * *

"In Halfback Tom Harmon, Michigan has one of the best runners in the country. When he's hit by a tackler, he 'gives' and if the tackle is not clean he'll break loose. He's also a fine passer and an excellent receiver."

Ohio players got a look at Michigan formations yesterday as they went through a light workout.

Coach Francis A. Schmidt, well aware that Coach Fritz Crisler of Michigan will strive to out-trick Ohio, also outlined some new forms of deception which he hopes will carry the Bucks through to their seventh victory in eight games

Both teams will be practically at full strength when they renew their ancient rivalry at Ann Arbor. Michigan's two prize cripples, Halfback Paul Kromer and Quarterback Forrest Evasheski, played against Pennsylvania last week and appeared in good shape. Ohio has only Fullback Jim Langhurst on the shelf

It was announced today that Langhurst will not be able to play Saturday and Schmidt was grooming Johnny Hallabrin of Mansfield for the position. Hallabrin showed up well in the fullback spot after Langhurst was injured against Illinois last Saturday.

HALLABRIN PROVES CLASS AGAINST ILLINOIS

The Ohio State Journal, Columbus, today said the following:

"The reliable Trainer Tucker Smith yesterday said: "Jim Langhurst's not likely to see even the slightest action again Michigan. His knee has been torn and twisted just below the cap and a chance of his playing is so remote that there's no use even to think about it." Jim, himself, admitted that the hurt was so painful that nothing less than a mending miracle could get him into the Buck lineup against Michigan.

"There's no need to tell what a blow Langhurst's injury is to Ohio State's chances Saturday in the game that may make or break the Scarlet's bid for an undisputed title. Not only will Jim's sensational talents for splitting lines be sorely missed but his great defensive ability will be needed worse than ever before with Harmon and Evashevski displaying their shifty, streaking ball carrying.

"But there's not much sense in lamenting over spilled milk and the Buckeyes aren't crying. Young Johnny Hallabrin, the lad who helped Mansfield High school become so tough in the gridiron that they were finally asked to withdraw from an outclassed league, will be back in there trying to pick up where he left off against the Illini.

"Jammin' Johnny, just a sophomore, played a whale or a battering ram type of game for over 30 minutes and while much needed experience is naturally lacking, Johnny can be counted upon to come pretty close to filling Langhurst's size 100 brogans.

"While Johnny didn't seem quite as quick a starter as his injured mate in his play Saturday, one must remember that continued rain was making the sod heavier and trickier every minute. Give John a dry field and the end fences might not even hold him in the Michigan stadium."

Selby Upsets 653 Pins In Club Loop

HAROLD SELBY of the Liederkranz club of the Club league held the spotlight at the Meder Recreation alley's last night. Selby put together games of 189 and a pair of 232's for a sparkling 653 total.

Despite Selby's big count, the Liederkranz club, which hit 2898, dropped two games to the Schoolmasters. Clyde Ritter helped the Liederkranz club with a 605.

The only other 600 in the league was turned in by Jack Graf of the Commercial Managers, who came through with a 634 as he led his team to a pair of wins over the Page Dairys Graf finished with a 245.

W Mabee was high in the Tappan Stove league with a 637 count, which was compiled from scores of 182, 223 and 232.

"HEART of Darkness," the picture which will introduce Orson Welles to the motion picture public, will go before the cameras Dec. 11. Welles is acting in, writing, directing and producing the screen version of this Joseph Conrad story. However, he will make an "invisible screen appearance" before this when he acts as the voice of the narrator in the opening sequence of "Swiss Family Robinson." He will not receive any screen credit for this and will donate his $25 salary to the Los Angeles Orthopedic hospital. . . . Donald Duck has been practicing elocution for the past several years and in his latest Walt Disney short, "Officer Duck," it will be noticed that he is growing more and more garrulous, but that his accent is improving and his vocabulary is greatly enlarged.

APPEALS COURT UPHOLDS DAIRY

Rules for Defendant in Breach of Agreement Action Filed by Plymouth Woman.

The Fifth district appeals court today had upheld the Isaly Dairy company, defendant in a $2,053 breach of agreement action brought by Mrs. Mary Chappell, Plymouth, former agent of the firm.

The appeals court's ruling, handed down following a hearing at Ashland, affirms a Richland county common pleas court decision. Mrs. Chappell appealed the decision after Judge C. H. Huston overruled her motion for a new trial.

When the case was heard here last May, the court awarded Mrs. Chappell a $14 judgment and awarded the dairy firm $482 as the balance due on an $800 loan granted Mrs. Chappell by the defendant firm.

Mrs. Chappell had contended that the dairy committed a breach of agreement when it allegedly paid her only two and a half cents a pound for butterfat after agreeing to pay three cents. She was the firm's agent in Plymouth.

Attys. Weldon and Huston were defense counsel and Atty. Clifford Brown of Norwalk represented Mrs. Chappell.

Just Thanksgiving But West Starts Yule Tree Harvest

KALISPELL, Mont.—(U.P.)—It may be just Thanksgiving but the harvest of one of Montana's most abundant crops—Christmas trees is under way in the western mountains of the state.

The harvest season lasts until Dec. 10. During that time about one-sixth of the 9,000,000 Christmas trees used annually in this country are cut.

Economically, the industry is an important one to the state. Two men are needed to cut a carload of trees and the season's 350 carloads provide 1,400 man-months of employment.

In addition to foresters' wages, the industry also pays for truck hire, stumpage and office rental. Railroads estimated their 1938 revenue on shipments of Christmas trees at about $100,000.

Twenty-three states since 1921 have passed acts levying taxes on cigarettes.

Kromer 'Absent Without Leave'

Crisler Declines to Comment on Back's Absence.

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—(U.P.)—Paul Kromer, the other half of the University of Michigan football team's "touchdown twins," was at his home today in Lorain, O., absent without leave from football practice sessions.

* * *

Kromer, punting and punt-receiving back who led Tom Harmon in team scoring last year, had been in and out of the lineup repeatedly during the current season with a complicated knee injury suffered early in the Michigan State game.

* * *

Friends said he had gone home for a rest and to visit his parents. He said before he left that he would be back Wednesday so team physicians could make another examination of his injured knee.

Coach Fritz Crisler declined to comment on Kromer's absence. Teammates expected him to return in time to bid for the starting assignment against Ohio State Saturday.

SENIOR LEAGUE MEETS

WISCONSIN WINS BIG TEN HARRIER TITLE

CHICAGO — (AP) — Wisconsin's cross country team made a clean sweep of title honors in the Western conference's annual harrier competition.

Walter John Mehl, Badger distance star who graduates in February, won the individual crown over the four-mile course in Washington park yesterday. His time was 20 minutes, 34.7 seconds. Wisconsin also won the team title, dethroning Indiana's 1938 champions. The winning team total was 28 points. Indiana finished second with 52 points. Ohio State and Purdue, only other schools having full representation, tied for third at 71.

Al Hostak, N. B. A. middleweight champion, faces Eric Seelig, and Henry Armstrong, welterweight titlist, meets Jimmy Garrison in the show's main fights, previously announced.

HONOR MADISON TEAM AT BANQUET TONIGHT

"This war," according to an editorial, "is a purely mechanical one." Yes, and the statements issued daily by belligerent governments sound just that way, too.

If Holland floods its countryside Hitler probably won't go ahead with invasion. He could hardly wish the world to read that the German army is all wet.

There is no dignity so austere that it cannot be punctured. And we'll bet there's been many a mounted cop whose ears burned as the kids yelled "Hi Yo, Silver!"

Fashionable French women says a fashion note, are wearing a new color—Maginot blue. Judging by the war news it should be a nice, quiet shade.

MINOR GAINS RULE MARKET AFTER OPENING

Flow of Generous Year-End Dividends Helps to Spur Buying Interest.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — The direction was slightly upward for the main body of stocks in today's market.

Shares accorded support included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Anaconda, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, N. Y. Central, Southern Railway, Westinghouse, Philip Morris, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, General Electric and Texas Corp.

Traders had little to go on in the way of news stimulus and, with another holiday looming — the exchange will close Thursday for Thanksgiving — the inclination of most boardroom sitters was to keep funds liquid and wait for more definite trend signs.

The flow of generous year-end dividends and bright earnings statements helped bring in buyers here and there, and the notable lightness of selling was encouraging to recovery ranks.

A favorable omen was seen in the condition statement of federal reserve member banks in 101 cities for the week ended Nov. 15.

NYA PROJECT UNDER WAY AT CHARLES MILL

Youths Start Work on Field Office, Fence for State Conservation Division.

A National Youth Administration project employing 25 Richland county youths was in operation today at Charles Mill reservation.

The NYA youths are engaged in the construction of a field office and tool shelter for the state division of conservation. The building which was started yesterday will be located just north of U. S. route 30 in Richland county, Philip B. Weaver, county NYA supervisor said.

Weaver said several miles of barbed wire fence also will be erected around the section of the lake north of route 30 that will separate the reservation from private property.

Both projects are expected to be completed within three months after which it is expected that the same group will then be called upon to fence in the reservation south of route 30 to Charles Mill dam.

State To Open Lake.

The fencing project is being sponsored by the state, which plans to exercise its lease on the property from the Muskingum Conservancy district and eventually open the waters to fishermen.

The fence is being erected prior to the posting of the property as a game preserve, officials said.

The conservation division recently transferred 18,000 fish including large mouth bass, blue gills and shad to the waters from the St. Mary's hatchery.

Inauguration of the project marks another step in the NYA's drive to employ boys between the ages of 17 and 25 years without previously acquired skill in order to give them actual training in woodwork, Weaver pointed out.

SEEKS SALARY INCREASE FOR WATER WORKERS

Shelby Council Passes First Reading of Ordinance Hiking Salaries.

SHELBY—An ordinance raising salaries of employes at the municipal water plant passed its first reading Monday night at the regular session of the council at city hall. The ordinance must pass two more readings and final passage in council before being finally approved.

The "surprise" ordinance was introduced to the council on a motion made by Councilman Kenneth Rothlisberger for its first reading. It was seconded by Councilman Chester Bell. The salary increase was approved on its first reading by a 4 to 1 vote in council. Councilman Charles Swanger opposed the increase.

The ordinance increases the pay of the operators from $85 a month to $100 per month, while the chief operator will be raised from a monthly salary of $100 to $110. If passed, the raise will effect five employes at the plant with an annual increase in the salary schedule of the company of $660, city officials said, and will go into effect on Feb. 1, 1940.

The ordinance came as a surto most of the councilmen.

Swanger opposed the increase, he said, because J. P. Adkins, superintendent of the utilities, was not present to explain the ordinance.

Other business approved by the council was an ordinance determining to proceed with improvements to certain alleys downtown and a number of resolutions certifying the life of the alley improvements, street improvements to West Jefferson avenue and Leitchy avenue, and the improvement of a sanitary sewer on West Maxwell drive was five years from Finance Director Bert Fix.

MINE WATCHMAN TAKES OWN LIFE

Shoots Self in Home as Wife Flees, Fearing Husband Planned to Kill Her.

MILLERSBURG — Howard W. Mohr, former resident of Millersburg, died in Dover hospital at midnight last night from a self-inflicted bullet wound.

He shot himself at 4 p. m. yesterday in the small house in which he lived near a Strausburg mine, where he was employed as a watchman.

His wife, Sadie, ran screaming from the house as her husband drew the gun, fearing that he intended to kill her, too. She summoned other men from the mine, but when they reached the house, Mohr had shot himself.

Mrs. Mohr said her husband had cried "I'll end your troubles and mine, too" as he produced the gun, which led her to fear that he had intended to shoot her as well as himself. Mohr had been in ill health for some time.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by a son, Louis, at home; seven daughters, Mrs. Leon Peters and Mrs. Robert Close of Millersburg; Mrs. Maynard Stewart, Loudonville; Mrs. Frank Charlton, Wooster; Mrs. Robert McDowell and Mrs. Paul McDowell of Berlin and Dora, at home. A brother, Bert, a sister, Mrs. Forrest Conner of Coshocton and 14 grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services will be held at the Elliott funeral home here Friday at 3 p. m. with Rev. J. E. Henderson officiating.

JAPANESE SHIP GOES DOWN IN MINED WATERS

11,930-Ton Nipponese Liner Was 14th Sunk in 4 Days Off British Coast.

Chamberlain recalled that during the World war the allies had seized German exports on the high seas in retaliation for U-boat attacks on merchant ships.

Comes As 'Bombshell.'

There had been reports last week that Britain was considering such drastic action as seizing German exports—in addition to the blockade of German imports—but Chamberlain's announcement came like a bombshell because of its possible effect on such neutral countries as Italy.

He charged Germany with violation of the Hague convention regarding use of mines. The convention provided that floating mines could be used only if they became duds after a short period.

Chamberlain, who appeared in the house for the first time in two weeks due to an attack of gout, was cheered as he announced the plans for reprisals.

Chamberlain said that the Hague convention to which Germany was a party provided that when anchored mines are used every precaution must be taken for security of peaceful navigation.

Chamberlain said that the convention provided that, a danger zone must be announced as soon as military exigencies permit, once the mines have ceased to be under observation of those who laid them.

The British mine-sweeping trawler Mastiff was sunk by a mine—a German one, the admiralty announced—in the North Sea today.

One of the Mastiff's crew died of injuries and four were missing. She was of 490 tons and was the sixth British warship lost in the war. She presumably went down while engaged in the perilous work of clearing mines out of the North Sea shipping lanes.

Another merchant loss, not a victim of the new activity, was confirmed today when the Newcastle lines announced that hope had been abandoned for the 4,600 ton steamer Newton Beach and her crew of 34, overdue for more than a month.

been launched in Mansfield schools.

"We have been encountering too much difficulty in scheduling games because of our refusal to play at night," he pointed out.

No decision has been reached as to how many night games ill be played in 1940, but it is expected that the Tygers will schedule night games until November, when the weather becomes too cold for night football.

Canton McKinley at present is the only school on the Mansfield schedule which does not have a night football plant of its own, but it has no objections to playing at night, Arlin stated.

Mansfield's schedule has not been completted, Arlin said, as it was decided to delay this matter until the board acted on the night football question.

The athletic board will meet in the near future to consider the purchase of lights and complete the 1940 schedule, which will again include the majority of the schools in this year's group.

Mansfield will complete two-year home-and-home agreements with New Philadelphia and Cambridge next year, and the two-year contract with the state championship Massillon team was recently renewed.

It is expected that the rivalry with Canton McKinley will be resumed next season, although the contract expired this year.

Shelby and Ashland will remain in the Mansfield schedule, but the other opponents have not been selected.

Frize told police, District Attorney Samuel Foley said, he killed "Grandma" because she scolded him for "running around with girls" and refused his request for money.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1939.

Think of the constructive work that could be done in Europe with the $100,000,000 a day now being wasted by needless warfare!

A biographer explains Stalin by saying he had such a hard youth that he naturally proceeded to make it hard for everybody. Some people are like that.

It remains to be seen whether the reported discovery of gold deposits in Georgia is the real thing, or merely a ruse to attract Florida-bound tourists.

Short-Time Job Fails to Attract

DETERMINATION of Mayor-elect Locke to choose a qualified engineer as service director appears to be in accord with what will be the probable requirements of this position during the coming administration—and thereafter for a number of years.

Engineering plays an important part in planning and carrying through city improvement projects and it is essential that the mayor, as general manager of the city's business, should be well informed on this subject or have someone in his official family on whom he can depend for information and advice.

Service and safety director was originally two positions in Mansfield, with a director for each—the safety department directorship having been a small-salaried part time job involving supervision of the police and fire departments.

When the positions were combined it was assumed that the salary would be sufficient to attract competent persons, but it was apparently overlooked that the position was of uncertain tenure, due to administration changes, and the result has been that qualified men in private employment have not been appealed to by the service-safety directorship, as is now the case with Albert L. Allen.

Under a city manager form of government, with assured permanency of tenure for persons having necessary qualifications, and with compensation commensurate with that of similar work in private employment, it is unlikely that such difficulties would be encountered.

Meanwhile, however, Mr. Locke should not feel satisfied with less than he has in mind in the matter of competent supervision of the service department.

Own More Cars Than Homes

THE BUILDING INDUSTRY might learn something from the automobile industry, according to Stuart Crocker, chairman of the advisory board of the Producers Council. It might find out, for example, why 90 per cent of American families with incomes over $2,000 a year own at least one automobile while only 51 per cent of them own homes. Or why 60 per cent of the families under the $2,000 group own cars and only 38 per cent of them homes.

Homes, like automobiles, he says, must be progressively better built and better equipped if they are to appeal to the prospective buyer. Every year the automobile buyer gets more beauty, performance, convenience and durability for his money.

"It is our duty and the duty of industry," Mr. Crocker urges, "to increase production and lower costs by seeing to it that every house of $3,500 or more has all the things that men and women want when they seek new homes.

The past decade has witnessed a considerable concentration of attention on the subject of durable and adequate small homes at a cost within the means of low income groups, but various factors have retarded more rapid progress along this line.

The idea of a home which would have a 40- to 50-year occupancy expectancy and which could be paid for in monthly installments extending over ten to twelve years, is appealing to those who look forward to eventual freedom from rent-paying.

Those Versatile Soybeans

THE SOYBEAN is gaining steadily in variety of uses. Wonder tales told by scientists when that oriental legume first dawned on Europe and America are far surpassed by reality. Not only do these marvelous vegetables provide valuable forage, improve the soil and offer raw material for almost countless industrial products, but they now play an astonishing role as a basic foodstuff usable in a great variety of ways.

Just now the soybean is expected to solve important problems in Germany. Supplies of this raw material brought from Manchukuo through Russia will provide many war materials, largely as by-products, and also meet serious food requirements of the German army.

Synthetic fats are produced from them to supply the lack of animal fats. Other soybean extracts are added to the army's basic foods—barley, noodles, flour, potatoes, rice, conserves, peas, lentils, cabbage and turnips—to make sure that the troops get essential vitamins.

Christmas Buying Starts Early

CHRISTMAS shopping has begun even before the early Thanksgiving and is expected to assume rush proportions by the beginning of December. Roger Babson said recently, "Smart buyers will do their Christmas shopping NOW." He might have said that they "are doing" it now.

He advised everybody to get at this pleasant chore as soon as possible, not simply to avoid the rush at the last minute, which is even harder on salespeople than on frantic shoppers, but for strictly utilitarian reasons. Observers and forecasters expect this Christmas season to break a lot of records for volume of buying. Late comers may be disappointed in not finding the things they want.

Economic States as Peace Formula

FRANK KNOX, editor of the Chicago News, suggests reorganizing Europe (with this nation merely as an observer) on a basis of economic rather than political facts.

"I envisage the eventual guarantee of peace," he says, "to lie in three major units of world organization. In Europe there should be some sort of a 'united states' not drawn up on political lines, but on economic lines, in the form of a customs union. The Far East, with its unique problems, would be another unit which might be tied together economically in a customs union. For the Americas there would be a third economic interrelationship."

This sounds sensible, but it is difficult to apply common sense to basic problems of government. People in international relationships, even more than in domestic affairs, tend to put first things last, letting politics and race prejudice interfere with economic facts.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—It may be that the real missing link between aboriginal African music and modern swing has been discovered. Louis Prima thinks so.

It is a thing that he has named the "Gleeby Rhythm,' because it has been played and chanted for 150 years by a small, obscure, semi-religious sect of Negroes living near Kenner, La., a town about 30 miles from New Orleans. This sect has kept its music in practically the same state in which it was brought over from the Congo. Their leader is an 82-year-old ex-slave who calls himself King Gleeby. Prima says he has the most extraordinary sense of rhythm he has ever seen.

The actual discovery was made by Henry Nemo, a song writer, who stumbled upon the "Gleebes" last November. The reason the "Gleebes" have kept their music a secret so long is that whenever a white man comes around they shut up.

* * *

NEMO told Prima about his discovery ,and Prima, a native of New Orleans, declared he had never heard of it. But last May, while home on a visit, he went down to Kenner and looked up The King. They got to be friends. The King even invited Prima to attend a few revival meetings, and in this way he came face to face with this strange sense of African rhythm.

Prima wrote down all of those tunes, and invited Gleeby to come to New York. He wanted to organize a 16-piece band to play current musical favorites in the Gleeby style. The main difference in old jazz, and new, is that the Gleeby's exists in a clear, pure state. It is altogether without sophistication. Since the Gleebes can't read music, their songs, like folk-lore, were handed down from generation to generation. Prima has been rehearsing for a solid month. Billy Rose is said to have sat in on one of these rehearsals, at the Hickory House, and been so "taken" that he offered Prima a year's contract for the "Diamond Horseshoe."

In any case, old Gleeby, the King himself, drifted into town last week, and Prima has made him "head coach" of the band. The King sits back and listens, and if the rhythm isn't in just that peculiar sub-Congo mood, he shakes his head. They pay attention to him, too. In matters of rhythm, he's strictly the boss.

* * *

THE Horse Show at Madison Square Garden was lots of fun. If you've never seen one, you ought to mark it down on next year's "must." The horses themselves get the "oh's and ah's," but some of those riders, in their snappy uniforms weren't far behind.

One thing should be kept in mind. Accept what you hear warily. There was a perfectly beautiful looking girl who was introduced to a young man and his belle, and then they began saying something about another girl. Her name was Elsie. "Let's go see Elsie—let's see the dear," one of the girls said. She sounded as if she was talking about her old schoolmate. And they hurried off to find Elsie. I probably wouldn't have thought a thing of it if Elsie hadn't happened along just then. Elsie was handsome, but in another way. Elsie was a filly—the prettiest little filly you ever saw.

How Innocent Is the Innocent Victim?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

A PILE of self-pity comes swashing in over this desk. Mostly from people who claim they're Innocent Victims.

Somebody, to hear them tell it, has done them dirt—without the slightest provocation on their part. Yes sir-e-e, their record is as spotless as a new born babe's! Never in their whole lives have they harmed a single soul. Instead, they've worn themselves to a thread trying to make everyone happy.

And what have they received in return? Abuse — that's what they've received! Base ingratitude! Callous indifference! Downright persecution! All because they had Great, Big, Wonderful, Generous Hearts!

Does the broadcast sound familiar? Sure it does. How many times have you heard it? Maybe you've even used it yourself—yes? Have I? I certainly have. Being an Innocent Victim is my favorite role.

BUT HOW OFTEN HAVE I REALLY BEEN AN INNOCENT VICTIM?

NOT ONCE IN A BLUE MOON!

Ninety-nine times out of a hundred, when I've been a victim, it was because I wished it on myself!

No; I didn't deliberately set out to harm anyone. To the contrary, I usually had the most excellent motives. I was friendly and fair. I offered excellent advice, and frequently performed loving and unselfish service. Yet, in the end, my advice was flouted, my services rented. I was treated as an intruder and an actual enemy. Why?

BECAUSE THAT'S ACTUALLY WHAT I WAS!

No matter how excellent my advice or admirable my motives, I was pushing in where I didn't belong.

I didn't belong in the other fellow's life. It wasn't my business to solve his problem. No matter how closely we were connected, or how deep the love between us—he had a right to run his own life.

That is the most sacred right, and the first duty of each one of us. We must shape our own lives—develop our own principles—build our own will powers. No one else can do that job for us—and what would our characters be worth if they could?

But we make mistakes? And often others could save us from those blunders? Yes. But it's as much our privilege, and quite necessary, to make mistakes as it is to make successes. And often our mistakes are far more helpful than our successes in forming our characters.

So, regardless of the bond or the emergency, it was up to me to keep hands off. I could give sympathy and help if they were requested, but that was all. I had no right to impose my ideas upon the other fellow. I had no right to try to run his life for him. Yet that was exactly what I was trying to do.

UNDER THE GUISE OF LOVE AND FRIENDLINESS I WAS TRYING TO RUN THE SHOW.

And, of course, he appreciated it at first. But presently that inevitable friction set in. For my ways weren't his. The rule that worked for me wouldn't work for him. The plan that seemed so excellent to me didn't fit his secret requirements at all. But I obviously expected that it would.

Worse yet—I frequently insisted that he should follow it. Which, naturally, put him on the spot. For he didn't want to follow it. He didn't want to live HIS life, or settle HIS affair, according to MY notions. He wanted to follow his own, cockeyed as they might seem to me.

Yet he couldn't tell me. For lookit all I've done for him! He should have been grateful. And, daggonit, he WAS grateful.

Only why in heck didn't I leave him alone? Why didn't I let him Be Himself, and work out things in his own way?

And why did I act as if I'd been personally insulted when other people didn't follow my plan?

How innocent is the Innocent Victim? Usually, not innocent at all. He's a victim because he went fussing around where he didn't belong—and he got hurt because he asked for it!

Walking Is Fun.

Of all forms of exercise, there is none more convenient, enjoyable and health-giving than plain, ordinary walking. Indeed it is this availability that makes so many shun it to their own physical loss.

Walking not only stimulates the body and brings a glorious feeling of strength and vigor, but it refreshes the mind and clears the cobwebs from the beams and corners and prepares the individual to approach his work with greater zest.

To derive the fullest satisfaction from walking it is best to go out in the open, and get away from the hard pavement and the distractions of traffic. While a level terrain may be interesting, a course which encounters hills is decidedly preferable. Hill climbing calls more muscles into play, and while it is a bit more strenuous, it is not as monotonous as walking over flat country.—Ohio State Journal.

Please give some exercises which will reduce the legs, thighs and hips.

This can be done only to a limited extent. Removal of local excesses of fat is not feasible. Exercises for the hips which strengthen them and tend to make a better contour are as follows:

Exercise 1—Lie on the back with the legs extended, and move one leg upward until the knee is as close as possible to the chest and the heel is touching the back of the leg. Then do this with the other leg and repeat 20 times.

Exercise 2—In the same position do imaginary bicycle pedaling.

Exercise 3—Kneel and with the arms stretched above the head bend first to the right and then to the left until hands are as close to the floor as possible. Repeat this 20 times.

Exercise 4—Stand with the feet about six inches apart and the arms extended over the head, and bend first to the right and then to the left, and backwards and forwards. Repeat 20 times.

Is scurvy really a dangerous disease nowadays or has it died out?

Scurvy in adults is very seldom seen because we have learned how to control it, but there certainly is a potential danger, as evidenced by the experience of the Italian troops in Ethiopia. They were all placed on a scientifically-arranged, anti-scurvy diet. In other words, every soldier was compelled to eat a lemon a day. There were no cases of scurvy in the Italian army. The Ethiopian army, on the other hand, is said to have had over 20,000 cases of scurvy because they were on an insufficient diet.

Why don't doctors use common and easily understood words?

The words that the doctor uses are time-saving and perfectly understandable to him. For instance:

-itis as a suffix means "inflammation, examples — appendicitis, tonsillitis.

-ectomy as a suffix means "to remove," such as appendectomy, tonsellectomy.

-osis as a suffix means a "diseased condition," such as nephrosis.

Prefix dys means "pain"; for instance, dyspepsia means painful digestion.

Other combinations refer to particular organs. For instance:

Arthro means a joint; thus, arthritis means inflamation of a joint.

Denti pertains to a tooth; derm to the skin; gastro, stomach; hepato, liver; nephro, kidney; neuro, nerve; osteo, bone; oto, ear; phlebo, vein; rhini, nose.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—There was a lot more to that Roosevelt-McNutt conference than the handsome Indianan suavely admitted when he emerged from the White House.

What is secretly in the works is a drastic shake-up of the social security board, wiping out the present bureaucratic three-man agency and either replacing it with a single director or putting the agency directly under the control of McNutt as federal security administrator.

Either is possible under the act passed by congress last spring giving the president the power of extensive government reorganization. The SS board has been under fire from two powerful groups for some time. They are:

(1.) New Deal insiders and congressional leaders, who are sore at Chairman Arthur Altmeyer for his diehard opposition to liberalizing old-age pension payments. Although vast sums in social security taxes are piling up in the treasury, Altmeyer has grimly fought against amendments to increase monthly checks to oldsters. This, of course, has added fuel to the agiation of Townsendites and other 'funny money" schemers.

(2.) Administration executives who are up in arms over the high-handed bureaucracy which dominates the social security board, and concerned over the discovery of millions of unidentifiable "John Doe" records in the SSB files.

* * *

"John Doe" Cards.

WITH pension payments due to start Jan. 1, these unidentified records are loaded with political dynamite, especially for McNutt, who is a red-hot presidential white hope. And no one knows it better than he.

Behind-the-scenes, McNutt has been vigorously prodding Altmeyer and his crew to clean up the chaotic records. Considerable progress has been made, but millions of cards—exactly how many is a matter of controversy—still are unidentified and will require many months and considerable expense to straighten out.

That the Altmeyer clique tried to block McNutt's appointment and is furious at his firm-handed scrutiny of its operations, has not helped to improve relations between them. On the surface they observe the amenities, but privately they are at daggers' points.

How soon the axe will descend depends on the report of an investigation that McNutt initiated several weeks ago. Inside word is that it is only a matter of time before the board goes the way of the junked bituminous coal commission. In this case, the social security system will be placed in the hands of a single responsible executive.

Charlie Edison.

CHARLES EDISON, acting secretary of the navy, is doing his best to have a battleship named for his native state, New Jersey. His first efforts went awry, so he addressed a personal note to his chief. Written in pencil on yellow scratch paper, the note said:

"Dear Mr. President: I had my heart set on having one of the battleships constructed during my 'tour of duty' named 'New Jersey.' Some real part of me would have been built into it. I can't help a feeling of keen disappointment."

And he signed himself, "Sentimental Charlie."

To this, the president replied with a memo, which said: "The noble state of Woodrow Wilson, Charles Edison, and Frank Hague will get a battleship just as soon as the dates allow it . . . I am glad you are sentimental!"

Note—In naming battleships for states, the navy takes each state in turn, according to the dates of decommissioning old battleships formerly bearing state names.

Dutch Dilemma.

THE situation in Holland is none too optimistic. Behind the scenes, dissension between Queen Wilhelmina and more liberal members of her government continues.

In Holland, the political group which corresponds to the "New Dealers" is Catholic. They favor wide-scale social reforms somewhat similar to Roosevelt's.

Queen Wilhelmina, a staunch conservative and also a strict Lutheran, is not in sympathy with this faction. Neither are the big Dutch bankers, who during the past summer were worried about the economic condition of the country and their own financial status. As a result, they have been complaining about heavy government expenditures, even have favored curtailing the defense budget.

In some respects the situation is comparable to the balance-the-budget demands in the United States, except that Queen Wilhelmina, unlike Roosevelt, is emphatically on the side of the bankers.

* * *

Nazi Third Degree.

THE QUEEN, being a constitutional monarch, must bow to the will of her cabinet. And the cabinet, being partially "New Deal," favors strong defense measures, certain social reforms, and staunch resistance against Germany.

Queen Wilhelmina and the bankers believe that Holland cannot possibly withstand Nazi invasion, and that it is wiser to give Hitler the submarine and air bases he demands. Leading business men particularly, feel that Holland will be bankrupted by war, business ruined, and it will take 50 years to recover.

Diplomatic dispatches from Europe indicate that this political difference within Holland is what the Nazis are counting on, and explains why they do not attack immediately. They are applying to Holland the same treatment they gave Czechoslovakia — the new Nazi third degree.

Eventually, the Nazis figure, the Dutch will become so weary of being under the constant shadow of attack, so hard-up financially, and so torn between these two factions, that Holland will fall into German hands without any real battle.

Merry-Go-Round.

AS A constant reminder of bumper cotton crops and excess supplies, Henry Wallace has a vase on his desk from which bloom three snow-white bolls of cotton . . . Abstemious is the word for Assistant Secretary of State Messersmith, who drinks no-liquor, no coffee, no tea, and smokes only an occasional after-dinner cigar . . . Assistant Secretary Berle is a small, lean man, who looks as if he saw little of the out-of-doors. His favorite sport, however, is mountain climbing. "My greatest joy in life," he says, "is to take a blanket and a five days' supply of food, and hit the mountain trails."

Saturday Night Bath

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

MOST FARMERS, I believe, have an inbred reticence about their baths. Bathing is a personal liberty which they do enjoy, but not in public or in conversation. The average farmer is disgusted by too much nakedness in print or pictures.

The inference of jokesters is that farmers bathe but once a week and then under protest. Some of them, to be sure, don't bathe that often. But, on the other hand, a modern bathroom does not vouch for its owner's cleanliness. It will be either the cleanest or the dirtiest room in the house, depending upon the habits of its users.

Some of the cleanest folks any of us ever knew lived all their lives on farms. A scrub up in a washtub behind the kitchen stove may give a man more luxurious invigoration than indulgence of a hot tub in a steamy, scented bathroom would.

Most farmhouses have some spot more comfortable for a bath than any other. Ours has a nook in the corner of the dining room beside the stove. Here, hidden from view, older children undress and bathe, emerging night-clad and moist behind the ears to race to bed up in the cold upstairs. The two littler boys prefer the kitchen sink. It has a drain, but no pump. By stopping the drain, the elevated basin is large enough for two little fellows to sit and dabble with the soap and wash each other's backs and feet until their mother is ready to help them with necks and ears, a dry towel, and night clothes.

Our children enjoy a shower. If I could choose bath facilities for my farm I think we would use shower baths for every day and keep the bathroom with a gleaming tub for Saturday night or Sunday.

Meanwhile, the demand for washtubs and old-fashioned boilers is giving jobs to city folks who live where they must have bathrooms. A washtub can be emptied into the drain, or upon the lawn. The farm woman has no bathroom to keep clean. And that brief shivering moment when a farmer hangs the washtub in the woodshed, on Saturday night, with the tang of frosty country air deep in his lungs, quiet stars overhead, and not a bathroom or a neighbor within a half mile, has a certain rugged kind of pleasure in it, too.

Meanwhile, the newspaper Hamburger Fremdemblatt charged that British mines sank the Netherlands liner Simon Bolivar.

Supporting the German admiralty's denials that German mines were responsible for the disaster, the paper declared "ultimate responsibility" for the sinking would be traced to the "negligent conduct" of the British navy in laying mines.

The paper also charged that British propaganda was seeking to "exploit the loss of the Simon Bolivar for its own purposes."

"The circumstances attending the disaster," said the newspaper, "can leave no doubt that one or two British mines caused the explosions aboard the Simon Bolivar."

The German admiralty expressed the opinion the British are laying mines in neutral shipping lanes to compel neutral ship owners and governments to accept British naval convoys.

"I'm glad," she exclaimed. "My life has been hell."

Last night, Miss Maddox was released on bail of $7,500 though charged in a police warrent of murder. The bail was set by Justice of the Peace W. L. Sterrett.

Coffman was 35, a lawyer, and married. He was known as a ladies' man.

Miss Maddox said she had known him for two years. They both worked in the same business district and last May 20 he offered to drive her home. Instead, she said, he drove her to a gravel pit. She resisted his advances, she said, and he stabbed her in the chest with an ice pick. He returned to Dallas and surrendered and she was taken to a hospital by a motorist.

His trial on a charge of assault with intent to murder was to have opened Oct. 16, but Miss Maddox didn't appear and the trial was passed to another term.

Miss Maddox, admitting that on Nov. 1 she had made an attempt on Coffman's life but the gun jammed, said she had been in fear of her life from Coffman.

Police appeared most concerned about the identity of a woman who was with Coffman when Miss Maddox approached him. She was an attractive young woman believed to have once been an employe of his law office.

Tells B. and O. To Wash Its Windows, Rebuild Stations

BALTIMORE—(AP)—A stockholder's suggestion that the Baltimore and Ohio railroad "wash the windows of its buildings" as the first step in a rehabilitation program highlighted a meeting of the railroad's stockholders today.

Harold B. Biehn, stone quarry operator at Washington Court House, O., made the suggestion.

"I'll bet the windows in B. and O. stations aren't washed once a year," Biehn said. "How can your employes and the public have any confidence in an organization that doesn't even wash the windows of its buildings?"

Biehn proposed a five-point plan for rehabilitation of the railroad.

He also proposed an educational program to show that railroad taxes go largely toward maintenance of public schools, recommended reorganization and modernization of the B. and O. public relations department and suggested that stations in rural districts be rehabilitated.

EDITOR'S NOTE TO MR. BIEHN: If you think the B. and O.'s rural stations are the only ones needing rehabilitation, drop down to Mansfield's sometime.

NAZIS SAY SUBS DO MORE THAN IN '14-'18 WAR

German Paper Claims British Envoy System Vulnerable to Air Attacks.

(By International News Service)

BERLIN — Britains blockade against Germany is problematical, because the submarine weapon has become more effective than during the World War and because the English convoy system meant to protect shipping against losses through submarines is highly vulnerable to attacks from the air.

This is claimed in an editorial of the Nationalzeitung, Essen, Field Marshal Hermann Goering's mouthpiece.

Doubting that British power will suffice to make the blockade a full success, the paper, pointing to the necessity of unhindered supplies for the British islands, writes:

Claim Technical Advice.

"The successes hitherto achieved by German submarines and the German air force have proven that technical progress reduced the effectiveness of even the most powerful instrument of the British blockade, the grand fleet. The figures of the first four weeks published on the submarine war have shown that in comparison to 1914 the effectiveness of the submarine weapon has increased.

"The next months will show whether the British convoy system will prove an effective defense. This system contradicts all precautionary measures against attacks from the air. It can already be said today that England's overseas supplies are more seriously threatened now than during the World War."

Investigating the tonnage of the British mercantile marine the editorial arrives at the conclusion that the British merchant fleet is by about one million smaller than in 1914 and that only 12 to 13 million tons are available to Britain for transports in comparison to 17 million tons in 1914.

UNUSUAL MARKER

MERCER, Me.—(INS)—Ancient burying grounds of many New England cities and towns display grave markers bearing odd inscriptions.

Probably the most unusual of all, however, is the old mill stone found in the local churchyard. Set in the stone is a brass plaque, bearing the inscription.

"In memory of an Elm Tree which stood in 1870 on the east branch of the stream 3-5 north of the village bridge. It was 32 feet in circumference, breast high, and was believed to be the largest tree ever grown in New England."

LEGACY OF LOVE + + + + + +

By KATHRN BEMIS

(Copyright, 1939)

CHAPTER XXXI

Rita laid her head on the pillow with one thought uppermost in her mind. She was through with Tom Cleveland. Irrevocably. The way he had behaved tonight was nothing short of disgusting. Why had she ever thought she loved him, that he was her man, all that tommyrot?

But she could not sleep. She finally got out of bed and went to the window to watch the faint sign of dawn coming with a splash of amber through the clouds.

She was totally miserable now. Things could never be the same again. Her heart was dead; she felt dead all over.

She pressed her hands hard against her throbbing temples and walked with trancelike step to the bed. She fell upon it suddenly, and burst into wild sobs.

Rita awoke around noon. Her head ached, but after a shower she began to feel more refreshed than she had any right to feel after last night's baffling experiences. She dressed quickly in lavendar shorts and halter, an edge of hope, for some unknown reason, percolating through her consciousness.

Last night she had thought her zest for living entirely gone—but things couldn't be that bad! She'd make an abrupt change in environment, if possible. She'd coax Delores to go back to Paris, she'd live with her and the count until she secured some sort of position.

What a grand plan! She would discuss it with Delores at once. They would leave this place, but plenty of distance between themselves and a lot of emotional rubbish. Love? She was finished with such—such incredible nonsense.

Rita snatched up the telephone receiver and asked to be connected with Delores' suite. She would talk to her mother at once about the two of them going to Paris to live—getting away from all this—from Tom who didn't explain—who didn't love her.

She waited impatiently for an answer, but none came. Oh well, this must be the maid's day off, and Delores was most likely sunning herself up on the sun-deck—perfecting that becoming tan she had acquired here in the desert at Palm Springs. She would find Delores after breakfast. Or was it now luncheon time?

With a brave show of gay defiance, Rita caught up a racket and hurried out to the elevator. After a bite to eat she might find a tennis partner. But not Tom Cleveland! Decidedly not. She was certain she had enough courage this morning to completely snub him. And sometimes it took quite a little.

She paused briefly at the desk in the lobby, thanked the clerk for the two letters he gave her, and took them out to read on the terrace. At a little table there she ordered tomato juice, toast and coffee. Then gasped in surprise as she looked at the uppermost envelope. Selia! Just when she'd made up her mind to shelve everything disagreeable.

"Better get it over with in a hurry," she told herself.

But Selia's note was a pleasant surprise. She begged Rita's forgiveness for her unpardonable display of temper. She said that Rita had been correct about dear little Lela; that she was making Roger the finest kind of wife. She ended by imploring Rita to return to her at once. Her affairs, she said, were in a dreadful mess, and only Rita could right them. She would double Rita's salary.

Rita smiled cryptically. "Not a chance, my dear," she thought, almost gladly. "I'm going to Paris with Delores—leave every trace of the miserable old past behind me!"

She took up the other envelope which bore no postmark. She stared credulously at it a frightened instant, then tore the envelope open with unsteady fingers. Delores? It looked like Delores' scrawling penmanship, and it was written on the hotel stationery.

"Darling," Delores had written. "I had to leave immediately—didn't want to disturb you so early. I'm on my way to New York. Sailing for Paris on the first boat. The poor dear count needs me. I've paid your hotel bill here a month in advance. If later on you'd like to come to me in Paris, let me know. Just now my nerves are killing me, and I know you'll forgive me if I run away."

It was signed, "Your devoted mother."

• • •

Rita was flabbergasted. Then she reminded herself that she could always expect the unexpected from Delores and shouldn't be too surprised now. Rita laughed aloud. Delores was needed by that poor dear count? Delores had her own system of living. When things didn't move her way in one place, she packed up and went on to new scenes where perhaps they might. She couldn't endure being ignored. As for having a grown daughter around—Rita's lips drew into tight line. If she weren't careful, she'd be feeling sadly neglected, even lonely again.

She ransacked her mind for an answer to her future. It was getting almost too warm for comfort now on the desert. From where she sat, she could see dozens of hotel guests preparing for departure in motor cars, others wating for the railroad station bus; trunks, bags, suitcases, were being piled into station wagons. None of the gay younger crowd seemed to be playing about this morning.

Rita attempted to rise above the checkmate she had encountered, throw off the deep dejection waiting to pull her into its depths. She had no desire for the food and drink now being set before her.

She asked the pretty little waitress, "What's become of everybody today, Nellie?"

"Goodness me, Miss Rhodes—they're checking out so fast I can't keep track of them. You leaving, too?"

"No—not just yet. Although—I haven't exactly decided."

"That's fine. We're sure going to miss your friends, though. Miss Sheen, Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Handy were awfully nice. And of course it gave the place an air—having a real countess around."

Rita smiled vacantly, tried not to show her agitation. Tom and Harry gone? What did it mean? And had they taken Eva?

Rita slowly sipped black coffee, seriously pondering this piece of news. Such extraordinary friendship existing in that trio! It should prove to her exactly what Tom Cleveland was. Birds of a feather? She tried to argue herself firmly into believing this, then began inventing excuses for Tom at every turn. Had she no pride, no self-respect? But it didn't seem important to her now whether she had or not.

Her spirits had slumped to last night's level, but she wouldn't cry again. Stoutly, she told herself she wouldn't.

She gulped down the second cup of coffee, strong and black.

Racket in hand, she went listlessly across the lawn white with cotton blown from the old cottonwood tree by the rose arbor. She paused beside the blue swimming pool, now occupied by only two timid middle-aged women and a thin little boy. She dropped to a bench by the pool's rim and sat there all of an hour trying to arrive at a logical conclusion about everything.

She started when she heard herself being paged. She signaled to the bellboy. She tore open the telegram he gave her, and read:

"BACK THIS AFTERNOON STOP WILL EXPLAIN EVERYTHING STOP MARRIED NEXT WEEK TOM"

Rita was quivering all over. Explain? Married? Why did he think she'd be interested in his marriage? Was it Eva—after all?

She couldn't sit still now; she must do something. She would take a walk, a fast, furious walk, conquer this absurd hammering of her heart. She didn't want to see Tom, she wouldn't see him, she—she despised him. No—she didn't despise him—she had to see him—she wanted to see him. Round and round she thought in this eternal circle, coming to no conclusion.

"I've got the jitters again," she told herself furiously. "And over Tom - Cleveland! Will I never learn?"

He found her late that afternoon in the village. He waited until she paid an Indian for the gay red and white basket she held in her hands, then startled her by exclaiming, "Darling! Why didn't you wait for me at the hotel?"

She paled, focused clear unfaltering eyes full upon him.

"So—it's you," she said coolly, but her racing heart was already out of control.

He took her arm possessively and walked her quickly to his car parked by the curb. He told her severely, "You're a maddening little creature, aren't you? Come on—get in. I've a lot of explaining to do."

She drew back stiffly, said cuttingly, "You're taking a great deal for granted. After the way you've been acting. . . ."

He fairly shoved her into the car, sat close beside her.

"I know how you feel, Rita—but I've landed the ten thousand dollar reward. The murderer's locked up! Last night up in my room, when he was too spifflicated to suspect anything, I got a confession from him—had a dictaphone. I wired Los Angeles, and detectives came right out and took him away this morning. Thank heaven, you weren't questioned! I've made every effort to keep you out of the mess—maybe you won't even have to testify that you heard those shots on the beach. Hurrah for our side! Now, I can have my legacy and . . ."

"Tom! Tom Cleveland are you crazy? What are you trying to tell me?"

"That Harry Handy is the man who shot old John Hanner. Harry was his nephew—he figured if his uncle passed out, he'd get most of the estate. But when the will was read, Harry found himself out of luck—he got nothing. He met your mother on the boat, from Paris and got the idea of edging out the count—living on her money."

"He'd have been gloriously fooled. Mother's fortune is tied up with the house of Delafield."

"That's lucky. But why don't you congratulate me? I've got the ten thousand—next it's wedding bells!"

"For a man who inherited the Cleveland estate, you . . ."

"Ah, there's the rub! Grandfather's will made it tough for me. I had to earn at least ten thousand—show I had enough business sense to handle the estate—before I could have any of it. Another proviso was—I had to marry the granddaughter of Horace Rhodes—he was my grandfather's college chum."

"Why— that granddaughter—that's me!" burst ungrammatically from Rita. "Why didn't you let me know?"

"I was furious—didn't want to marry you. I read about you in the gossip columns, thought you were nuts. Then I decided to do a little detective work. I crashed the Frost masquerade party disguised as a clown and managed to talk to you. I paid Wilmot Green plenty to get that chauffeuring job—but he never suspected who I was. I wanted to find out all about you. Servants get to know people pretty well, you see. I thought if you met me as the Cleveland heir, your shallow little heart would be awfully keen over me—some girls are funny that way."

She turned tear-stained cheeks to him, the pitiless sunlight revealing all her pent-up emotion. She said shakily, "It's—it's not fair that you have to—to marry me. You and Eva. . . ."

He took her by the shoulders, shook her gently as he said, "Come out of your trance, darling! I was trailing Eva because she blabbed a lot about a certain tall cousin of hers who had lost out in the Hanner will. It set me to thinking. Eva was corresponding with Harry, and I tried to keep in touch with his movements through her. It was only a hunch—but I had to get that ten thousand somehow, honey. Great Scott! I covered enough miles following up false clews! I wasn't traveling for my health all that time I was out of town. But it's you I love, dear—you I'm marrying—that is, if you'll have me."

There was a dearness about this uncertainty of his that made a lump rise in her throat. Her heart was hammering furiously, in her cheeks was a high crimson loveliness no cosmetic could ever imitate.

With a glad little cry her arms went swiftly around his neck. "Darling—oh, darling!" she whispered tremulously.

He held her tightly to him there in broad daylight for all to see. His warm vibrant lips on hers sent her into a heaven of which dreams are made, a heaven of which poets sing. This was love.

(THE END)

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!

When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is: get at the cause. If you are constipated, don't fiddle around with make-shift remedies. Find out what's giving you the trouble!

Chances are it's simple if you eat only what most people do: meat, bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If that fits you, your ticket is a crisp crunchy breakfast cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the great intestinal tonic, vitamin $B_1$.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and just watch the old world grow brighter! Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Japs to Ask U. S. to Renew Trade Treaty, Envoy Says

FORMAL NOTE TO BE DRAWN SOON, REPORT

Failure to Renew Pact Would Be 'Disadvantageous to Both,' Says Japan's Ambassador.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—The Japanese government will ask the United States to renew the U. S.-Japanese commercial treaty, expiring Jan. 26, Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi declared today.

He said in an interview that failure to replace the treaty with another commercial pact would be "distinctly disadvantageous to both countries." He stated the Japanese foreign ministry in Tokyo will take up the matter with American Ambassador Joseph Grew.

The American government, for reasons admited as political, served the required six months' notice for termination of the treaty in July.

This action followed vigorous congressional protests at the increasing American exportation of scrap-iron, trucks and similar supplies to Japan, used in its undeclared war against China, and the Japanese disregard of American rights in China.

State department officials have indicated that any moves for renewal of the pact would have to come from Japan, and Horinouchi's words comprised the first reliable information in the capital that his government would formally seek renewal. In Washington officials denied that any discussions of a new pact have been held, but the Japanese diplomat said his government's foreign ministry informally brought up the subject in conversations with Grew about a month ago.

Horinouchi explained that he expected the Japanese foreign ministry in Tokyo to formally propose either renewal of the commercial treaty or substitution of a status quo "modus vivendi" or gentlemen's agreement for trade continuation in new conversations with Grew in the near future.

Food Blocked, Charge.

Japan's troubles in arranging a new treaty were aggravated by recent incidents reported at Tientsin in cables to the state department from the American consul general there, John K. Caldwell. He reported that Japanese authorities were blocking transit of food, fuel and other commodities into the British and French concessions in Tientsin, where most members of the American colony reside.

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles announced that American representatives have been instructed to reiterate to the Japanese this government's stand that such delays are illegal.

TAFT PROPOSES PROGRAM FOR FARM MARKETS

Offers Plan to Secure U. S. Market for American Farmer In Missouri Statement.

(By Associated Press)

KANSAS CITY—Steps to "secure the American market for the American farmer" were advocated today by Sen. Robert A. Taft (R-Ohio.)

This was one of several approaches to the "agricultural problem" Taft proposed in an interview here. He contended emphasis should be placed "on the necessity to find more uses for American farm products instead of limiting farm production."

He proposed also wider work in the science of chemurgy, to find new uses for farm products; that trade treaties should not permit goods to enter the country to be sold at a price lower than domestic products; and disposal of marginal lands by sale of lease.

Leasing lands to families for raising garden produce, cows and chickens for their use only was preferable, Taft said.

"I'm told," said the senator, "that if the government had devoted all the money it has spent on agriculture to the disposal of marginal lands, that the problem would be disposed of."

He defended "subsidy" of farmers, but asserted it "ought to be confined to soil conservation."

"I don't believe in production control. It ought to be gradually abandoned, but it should not be attempted overnight," he added.

Concerning trade treaties, he declared: "The old method of tariffs was so bad that any method is an improvement, but if we are going to make trade treaties it seems to me they ought to include the principle that tariff should not be reduced below the difference in cost of production."

The junior senator from Ohio further suggested that the federal social security plan be altered so employes would not be required to participate, but employers would be forced to contribute if workers desired the plan.

Taft commented that he was "not confident enough now" of his candidacy for the 1940 Republican presidential nomination to say that these proposals are "my program."

KUHN SAYS HE HAD RIGHT TO USE BUND FUNDS

'Leadership Principle' Gave Bundster Supreme Authority, He Testifies at Trial.

(By United Press)

NEW YORK—Fritz Kuhn, called as a surprise witness in his own defense, testified today at his trial on grand larceny charges that as leader he had "the right to use' funds of the German-American bund "as I saw fit."

The "bundesfuehrer," who is accused of appropriating bund money to his own uses—which allegedly included paying the moving costs and medical bills of women friends—testified that the bund's "leadership principle" gave him supreme authority.

Questioned by Defense Attorney Peter L. F. Sabbatino, who previously had indicated that the defendant probably would not be called, Kuhn spoke in an almost inaudible voice.

"Under the leadership principle," Sabbatino asked, "what authority did you have over the funds of the bund?"

"I had the right to use them," Kuhn replied.

He testified that at first he allotted himself a salary of only $300 a month, but that, in the bund's 1937 convention, he was given full power over the treasury.

"Some delegates," he testified, "said I should not be limited to a salary but should have a drawing account and use the funds altogether as I saw fit.

"It was voted that I should have a drawing account and dispose of the funds as I saw fit."

Kuhn said he was 42, married, the father of two children and a United States citizen. He worked first in this country for the Ford Motor company at Detroit, he said, receiving $300 a monh as a chemist.

He helped to organize the bund and attended its first convention in 1936, Kuhn said. Ever since his elevation to the post of bundesfuehrer he has acted, Kuhn said, under the "leadership principle" which other witnesses have testified gave him "absolute power" over everything in the organization.

START WORK ON $4,000 SEWAGE PLANT PROJECT

City Workers to Install New Sludge Drying Beds, Boost Capacity 40 Per Cent.

Work was started today on a $4,000 improvement at the municipal sewage treatment plant that will provide additional sludge drying capacity.

Service-Safety Director Earl A. Nist said that a crew of street department employes were engaged in clearing and leveling the land at the rear of the plant where the new beds are to be built.

Actual construction of the drying beds will not begin before next week when it is expected that the excavation and fill-in work will be completed.

The project, which has been approved by the state department of health, is under the supervision of D. D. Orewiler, superintendent of streets and James R. Turner, sewage plant superintendent.

Plans Call For 7 More Beds.

Plans call for the construction of seven additional drying beds that will add 22,500 square feet to the present drying capacity, an increase of about 40 per cent.

More than 1,000,000 gallons of sludge have accumulated at the plant because of the limited drying capacity.

As designed the plant originally had 46,000 square feet of drying beds. A year ago this was found to be inadequate and an additional 11,250 square feet were added.

The improvement is being financed from a special PWA fund, the balance from which the sewage plant was constructed four years ago. Council authorized the expenditure at its Nov. 7 meeting.
